• SHAHI TUKDA •

Shahi-tukda is a rich and festive dessert made with bread, ghee, sugar, milk, and nuts. It is a very popular classic royal dessert and is said to have originated during the Mughal reign. There are different stories which relate to the origin of this delicious dessert. Traditionally Shahi-tukda made by deep frying bread pieces in ghee until golden and crisp. Then they are dipped in sugar syrup. To finish off, a generous amount of thickened creamy Saffron milk known as RABRI is poured over them. Lastly shahi-tukda is topped with mawa and roasted nuts like cashews, almonds and pistachios.

This delicious dessert is high in calories so it is usually eaten in small portions.

This festive malai cake is a delicious fusion cake combining the best of both worlds making it an ultimate dessert to treat your sweet tooth! And it is completely cake. :))

So this malai cake was trending last year and I've been putting it off to even try it since then.

And it is pretty evident in my amateurish finish! And I only make a frosted cake for an occasion, with brings us to today's post.

Immunity boosting element of my traditional recipe :-

The recipe which I've made is 'Mango Shahi Tukda', is something one can enjoy guilt free. as all of the ingredients which I've used is healthy. I made this royal recipe by replacing all the unhealthy ingredients with the healthy ones. I replaced the sugar with brown sugar which helps in increasing the nutritional value of the recipe. I used whole wheat bread (Brown bread) which is high in nutrition, fibre, it supports healthy digestion, reduce risk of obesity. Other than these health benefit facts it has many other heart healthy benefits. Do I even have to mention about the benefit of the dry fruits? We are all aware of the nutrition value it has such as vitamins, proteins. It also boost immunity and prevent lifestyle diseases such as cholesterol and diabetes. And, the heart of my recipe "Mangoes" are so rich of vitamins such as A, C, K. It is also rich in potassium, Beta-carotene, Folate, Choline and magnesium. which ultimately boost the immunity, supports heart health, improves digestive health, eye health. It is also best for Hair & Skin, lower risk of certain cancers. So, this royal piece is the tastiest guilt free recipe to add cherry on the cake on Eid.
